THE GOLD OF HOPE.

Bright shines the sun, but brighter after rain;
The clouds that darken make the sky more clear;
So rest is sweeter when it follows pain,
And the sad parting makes our friends more dear.

'Tis well it should be thus; our Father knows
The things that work together for our good;
We draw a sweetness from our bitter woes—
We would not have all sunshine if we could.

The days, with all their beauty and their light,
Come from the dark, and into dark return;
Day speaks of earth, but heaven shines through the night,
Where in the blue a thousand star-fires burn.

So runs the law, the law of recompense,
That binds our life on earth and heaven in one;
Faith cannot live when all is sight and sense,
But Faith can live and sing when these are gone.

We grieve and murmur for we can but see
The single thread that flies in silence by;
When if we only saw the things to be,
Our lips would breath a song, not sigh.

Wait, then, my soul, and edge the darkening cloud
With the bright gold that hope can always lend;
And if to-day thou art with sorrow bowed,
Wait till to-morrow, and thy grief shall end.

And when we reach the limit of our days,
Beyond the reach of shadows and of night,
Then shall our every look and voice be praise
To Him who shines, our everlasting light.

NEARLY A MISTAKE.

Better be an old man's darling than a young man's slave."

This had been Jessie Vernon's constant laughing answer to the many questions heaped upon her as to her strange choice—strange only because James Usilton had been a man of twenty-five when Jessie's violet eyes first had opened upon the world.

She was nineteen now, and he a man of forty-four.

An old man's darling indeed,
His darling, yes; but in the light of an old man, a hundred times no!

The wonder lay that he should have stooped from his grand height to her.

But he smiled sadly when he listened to her repetition of these things.

"I don't think you quite realize the gulf of years between us," he would answer her. "Think, Jessie—in six more years I shall be fifty, and you will scarce be twenty-five. Are you sure, darling—sure you will never regret?"

Once, when he had said to her something like this she burst into tears.

"Hush, hush!" she entreated. "You speak as though the heart might grow old. As long, James, as I do not seem too frivolous a child to be honored by your love, never again wound me by a doubt."

The words sank deep into his heart.

In future years he had sore need to find comfort in their memory.

The wedding-day at last dawned clear and bright.

He vowed, as he uttered the solemn pledges at the altar, that at any sacrifice he would make her happiness.

It was a silent vow, but none the less sacred.

Two years passed on.

He would have held time back in the new joy of his experience.

Their boy was not a fortnight old when he entered his wife's room with an open letter in his hand.

She was resting in a large arm-chair, the violet eyes bent downward with new beauty in their depth to scan the little face pillowed on her breast.

"See, little mother," he cried, "I have just heard from Carl. He is coming home. He will be with us almost any day."

"Oh, I shall be glad to know him," she replied; "but jealous, James—a little jealous, I fear—you love him so well."

"As well as though he were my son," he answered fondly. "No—no! I used to say that, but I know now differently. It will be for him to feel jealous, my darling, not for you. He will find two usurpers in the place he used to fill."

And he stooped to kiss the two faces, between which he liked to trace the strange likeness.

Carl Howard had grown to Jessie almost to be a household word.

He was her husband's ward—the son of a friend who had been to him dearer than a brother, and who, dying, had constituted him sole guardian of his only child.

The young man had just commenced his college career when his father died.

After finishing it he had gone abroad, and it had now been six years since his leaving his native land.

To Jessie he seemed still a boy, for as such James spoke of him.

Unconsciously, now that he was coming home, she found herself devising schemes for his amusement

He might find their country home dull, beautiful as it was in its June dress, she mused.

Perhaps, now that she had grown strong and well again, she might invite a gay party of young people to fill it.

But before she had time to put any of her plans into execution, Carl arrived.

She and James were sitting together on the piazza, when a carriage drove hastily up, and out from it sprang a young man, tall, broad-shouldered, and even in the dim twilight, unmistakably handsome.

James started up to meet him, taking both outstretched hands in his in a way which showed how genuine was his welcome.

Then he led him proudly to his wife.

"Jessie, this is Carl."

"Why, uncle."—this was the title he had always given him since his childhood—"I thought this was some little girl visiting you!"

And truly, in her white wrapper, buried in a great arm chair, Jessie looked but a child.

All three laughed merrily.

The ice was broken—Carl was one of them.

Looking back at that hour, as the weeks sped on, how strange it seemed to look beyond.

Before Carl came seemed almost a blank, so did his young life fill the place.

Jessie never had had a brother; but she felt this gap in her life was filled now.

She and Carl were sworn friends.

It was he who rode with her when James cared not to go—who walked with her when James was busy—who stood ready at all times to be her humble and devoted cavalier.

She had expected a mere boy; she found a travelled man of the world, full ten years her senior.

When she told him her plan to fill the house, he would not listen to it.

"Let us be alone," he pleaded; and she was but too willing to give assent.

It was a joyous summer.

They allowed no sovereignty save baby.

Over all three, he held undisputed sway.

"You have made my uncle young again," Carl said to her, one day.

"Hush!" she replied. That is treason. We cannot make him what he already is, or return to him what he has never lost."

"You are happy?" James would sometimes say to her, yearningly—"quite happy?" as though he dared not believe in the sunny brightness of his life.

"Jessie," Carl began once, as they sat alone together, "I am going to confide to you a secret no one knows as yet, not even my uncle. I am in love. I have been fighting against it myself for long. In my wandering life I have grown sceptical as to married happiness. What I have seen here has renewed my confidence, and I intend to put my fate to the test, and if I am fortunate, next summer I shall bring my bride here. Will you open your heart to her too?"

"Indeed—indeed I will," she answered earnestly.

And from that hour a new tie bound them.

"Why do you not tell Jame!" she would often ask him.

But he always answered;

"Wait.'

Once he came to her with a letter in his hand, his handsome face alight with joy.

"It is all right, Jessie," he cried out. "Oh, can I tell you how proud and glad I am? And it is to you I owe it. It is you who taught me the power of love—what it is, what it may do; you who have given me this happiness I might never else have tasted. Jessie—Jessie! why did I not meet you earlier?"

"Oh, Carl, you can never love as I do!" she answered, when something sounded through the room as she uttered the last word.

Both glanced up.

The master of the house stood in the doorway, white and stern, but with an awful sorrow in his kind eyes.

Jessie sprang to his side.

"What is it, darling? What has happened?"

Could it be that she did not know he hae overheard Carl's last words to her? he wondered.

Could it be that she had grown so accustomed to their meaning that she could not comprehend the awful vista they opened before his hitherto blinded eyes?

Could it be that she was so versed in deception that she could so readily call up the old love-light in the sweet face, where he had thought to read the content he had given her?"

"It is nothing he said hoarsely and turned away.

Something in his manner hurt and chilled her, but when they had next met it had gone.

He was more watchful, more tender—that was all.

Of the long dark hours he had passed she could dream nothing.

"I strove to make her happiness," he would repeat softly to himself, "at any cost—at any cost. And it is still all my fault; I threw them together. How well they are suited to each other. With each of them life is just beginning; with me—oh Heaven—I would that it had ended 'ere I lived to see this hour. But how can I make her happiness—my darling's happiness? I will find a way, and Heaven will forgive the sin."

Three days passed.

What had happened to her husband?

Once Jessie found his eyes fixed on her face as though they would pierce their way into her soul

"I believe James suspects we have a secret" she said to Carl one day. "Will you not let me tell him of your happiness?"

"Yes, you may tell him now," he answered. "He will understand why I give you my confidence, even before him."

In the twilight she knocked at the library door.

There was no answer, and she opened it softly and went in.

A letter lay on the table, addressed to herself.

She tore it open, and with blanched face and wide staring eyes, read the written page.

He wrote—

"Good-by, my darling. I have found out (how matters not) that you and Carl love each other. I do not blame you. No momentary doubt of your womanly truth and purity has crossed my mind, but I swore to give you happiness at any cost, and I go to keep my oath. If ere long news of my sudden accidental death comes to you, you will know that I did not count the cost lightly, and remember that I died blessing you, and that it is my wish you and Carl should find with each other the happiness you missed with me. I could not hope, darling, to blend your young life with mine, yet the dream while it lasted was full of sweetness. Perhaps Heaven will give it back to me in eternity."

Like a spectre she hastened back to the room she had left, and thrust the letter, on which the ink was hardly dry into Carl Howard's hands.

"Find him," she moaned, "find him. Bring him back to me, or never let me look again upon your face."

Then with a shrill scream from the young lips, as the full extent of her misery burst upon her, she fell fainting to the floor.

For hours she was unconscious; but when at last the violet eyes opened they looked into her husband's face.

Carl had found and brought him back to her.

With a few hasty words all had been explained.

Through an accident of time the dread verdict "Too late" had not been pronounced.

The handsome face bending over her pillow was aged with misery, but to her it had the light of eternal youth.

She heeded not his passionate prayer for forgiveness.

She forgot that he had wronged her; only, with her clinging arms about his neck she drew him down—down to the sacred shelter of her breast.

The World's End.

The belief that the world would come to an end in the year 1000 was associated with, if not absolutely derived from, a much older belief entertained by the earliest astronomers of whom any records remain to us. They considered that certain cyclic periods of the planetary motions begin and end with terrestial calamities, these calamities being of different characters according to the zodiacal relations of the planetary conjunctions. Thus the ancient Chaldeans taught (according to Diodorus Siculus) that when all the planets are conjoined in Capricornus the earth is destroyed by flood; when they are all conjoined in Cancer the earth is destroyed by fire. But after each such end comes the beginning of a new cycle, at which time all things are created afresh. A favorite doctrine respecting these cyclic destructions was that the period intervening between each was the Annus Magnus, or great year required for the return of the then known planets to the position (of conjunction) which they were understood to have had at the beginning of the great year. According to some this period lasted 360,000 years; other assigned to it 300,000 years, while according to Orpheus it lasted 120,000 years. But it was in every case a multiple of a thousand years, and the subordinate catastrophes were supposed to divide the great year into sets of so many thousand years.

An Indian Home.

The house is situated in a natural locust grove, on the Cherokee nation, such as sprinkle the beautiful prairie to which their presence gives a name. It stands on a slight elevation in the midst of yard, garden, farm-steading and field. It is not of logs, as is most common, but is what in the west is called a "frame house," and is built of sawed lumber from a neighboring mill. Like all houses in a mild climate that invites to spend so much life out of doors, it has an ample piazza, furnished with split or hide-bottomed chairs, and containing a fixture for a hand basin and towel.

The yard is decorated with native and cultivated flowers, rose trees in large growth and of luxuriant bloom, and honeysuckle wearing an odoriferous mantle of blossoms. Within the house is comfortably furnished with antique bedsteads and cases of drawers that are evidently heirlooms, and perhaps came to the country with the emigration of the Cherokee people Two ancient oil painting ornamented the walls—the father and mother of our hostess—taken in old age by some artist who visited the country, and representing in both instances striking countenances, having been the captain of a Cherokee company that fought the hostile Creeks at the battle of the Horse Shoe under Andrew Jackson. Tin-types portraits of our host and hostess, and the heir of the family, a bright boy now at school at the male seminary at Tahlequah, complete the picture gallery. A few books and a number of newspapers furnish the reading matter. Everything is neat and clean, showing the presence of a notable housewife.

POVERTY is hard, but debt is horrible; a man might as well have a smoky house and scolding wife which are said to be the two worst evils of our life.

ROUMANIA excels all other countries in Europe in the production of Indian corn. The average yield is thirty-four bushels per acre, the total crop aggregating about 108,000,000 bushels.

The World's Champion Oarsman.

Ever since Edward Hanlan first appeared in his shell, winning races over all comers, his style has been the subject of criticism and attempted description by watermen and newspaper writers. To the writer who has watched the champion in practice and races, no writer seems to have as fully mastered the reason for his success like a recent critic in the London Sportsman. In the first place he states that Hanlan has improved greatly in the past two years. He appears to have "filled out" slightly; his muscles, as in common with men of his age, have hardened and acquired more power and his style of propelling a racing craft has, if anything become more beautifully perfect. The reasons assigned for Hanlan's progress are that he has tried every improvement in boats, fittings and sculls, has brought intelligence to bear upon the subject of sculling, and has taken wonderful care of himself. He is discreet in the selection of his food, but has stepped outside of cherished traditions. He is no advocate for the consumption of half raw chops or badly underdone cutlets, which was once supposed to be so strengthening, nor does he entirely refrain from light puddings or other little delicacies to vary the daily menu. He recognizes the theory that the absorption of fluids rather than the consumption of solids prevents the frame from being relieved of superfluous flesh. While he does not wholly abstain from intoxicants, he has always been a temperate man. Before Hanlan will consent to start in a race he must know by actual trial that his boat is in harmony with himself. He adjusts the boat to his action not his action to the boat. But the best part of the criticism relates to his stroke. As it displays a thorough understanding of the art of rowing and describes a stroke which has been phenomenally successful, we give it at length for the benefit of our aquatic friends The sportsman says, "Hanlan is careful to drop his sculls in a cleanly and neat style into the water, not dipping too deep, but merely exercising caution that the blades shall be well covered. His chief strength is exerted when the sculls are at perfect right angles with the boat; he pulls his stroke through with an even exertion of strength and invariably finishes with a powerful "wrench," if that word is appropriate It should be noticed that he never concludes his slide until he has completed his stroke. Thus the muscles of the arms, shoulders, back and legs work in perfect harmony. When he has finished with a vigorous effort he whips his sculls out of the water like lightning, and under the influence of his final "thrust" the boat is naturally progressing until he gets to work again. We have seen scores of oarsmen who put their full power into the initial effort and closed very languidly. The mere fact of their allowing the sculls the drag in the water even for an instant must necessarily deprive the light shell of some of its "way," and thus we have that jerky style of progressing but too commonly noticeable. We shall not be wrong if we say Hanlan finishes up quite as strongly as he begins his stroke, and we really believe if some of our representatives will perl severingly endeavor to adopt thimethod they may be gratified with ths result."

Domestic Comforts.

Among the recently granted patents is one for the cooling of dwelling houses offices, hotels, etc., by means of compressed gas, which is conducted from a street main into the premises in pipes like ordinary gas. The compreseed gas on being allowed to expand within a suitable receptacle, produces a very low temperature. Thus the housekeeper, simply by turning the gas faucet, will be able to make ice, supply the dwelling in hot weather with cold air, and produce all forms and degrees of refrigerations with the utmost facility. fOur houses being now supplied from street mains with cold water, hot water, compressed gas, and electricity, we now only need, to complete the comforts of living, a milk main and tea and coffee mains; after which perhaps the public will call for soup pipes.

Washington's Log Cabin.

The log cabin which Washington made his headquarters when a surveyor in the valley of Virginia still stands intact over the spring at Soldier's Rest, Clarke County. Soldier's Rest was built by General Daniel Morgan, of Revolutionary fame. When bruised and, bloody from the numerous fights with which he was wont to celebrate Court day in the neighboring town of Berryville, he would retire to the old spring house, where his wife would bathe his head and bind up his wounds. The cabin is now used as a dairy.

The Journey of the Bell.

The journey into London of Great Paul, the new and monster bell designed for St. Paul's Cathedral, was attended with many difficulties, some of them great. Several times the road gave way beneath the weight, until the truck became half buried in the earth. Wherever the road was soft the wheels, though very broad, would sink into the soil, so that on a certain day only about fifty yards of the journey was traversed.

Fuller Particulars.

The reporter saw two horses dashing down a street in Salt Lake City with a few pieces of the harness left and also a portion of the running gear of the carriage. He made directly for the spot where the horses had left the carriage, and by following the track of spokes, hubs, and fragments of the carriage soon reached the wreck. There was a man standing by looking at it with some interest.

"How'd this happen?" asked the scribe.

"Dam fino," rejoined the man. "Horse kind of runaway, I guess."

"Can you give me any particulars?"

"Well, no, I did not see the first of it. Guess didn't amount to anything anyhow. Got scared at somethin, I s'pose."

"Anybody hurt?"

"Well now, stranger, I couldn't say. 'Pears to me somebody did mention it, but I forgot now who 'twas. Ain't much acquainted in the ward anyhow."

"Do you know anybody that does know?"

"Guess the horses got skeered somehow."

The reporter calls on eight or ten eyewitnesses of the scene and none have sufficient intelligence to give any account of the accident, which happened right under their noses. All seem to labor under the impression that they will be arrested and sentenced to ten years' hard labor in the Penitentiary if they impart a single scrap of information. Inside of ten minutes the man first interviewed reaches home and his memory begins to liven up. He tells his wife all about it.

—"I tell you, Sal, I never saw auch an all fired runaway as I saw just a while ago. Billy Brown's two-horse team ran away, threw Mrs. Brown and two children out and knocked old Brown senseless. I was right there and helped to carry him over to Thompson's The buggy struck a tree and smashed the daylights out of it. Guess Brown will die. They say his leg was broke, left leg, just below the knee, and Mrs. Brown's jaw was smashed. The children, Betsy and Clara, wasn't hurt so much."

"I suppose it'll be in a paper in the morning."

"Bet you don't see a line there; reporters are too cussed lazy to hunt an item anyhow, and then they never get it right."

In the morning the man looks in his paper and cusses it for not giving fuller particulars.

I'm Her Husband.

Once, when Mme. Rentz and her famale minstrels were performing in San Francisco, a well-known Front-street merchant—one of the front orchestra-seat brigade, whose head was more clear than level—waited around the stage entrance to the Standard Theater after the performance trying to conceal a handsome bouquet under his ulster.

For a long time he kept peering at the different specimens of Mme. Rentz's sirens, as they put up their umbrellas and trotted away in the rain. After waiting patiently for about an hour, he approached an individual with a red scarf and a slouched hat who stood smoking a cigar at the entrance, and said:

"Can you tell me, sir, if Miss Chlorine has gone home yet?"

"Oh, yes, been gone half an hour," replied the slouch hat party cheerfully. Those flowers for her?"

"Well—er—um—yes."

"I'll give 'em to her—see her later," said the obliging man.

"Will you? That's very kind surely."

"Oh, not at all," said the man, smelling the bouquet with the air of a connoisseur. "Anything else?"

"Well—ahem!—yes. Just give her this pair of ear-rings."

"Certainly. What name shall I say?"

"Just say that 'Baby Mine'—she'll understand—sends love, and says 2.30 at the same place to-morrow."

"I'll just make a mem. of that," said the red-tie man, writing on his shirt-cuff, "2.30, same place to-morrow. All right. Anything else?"

"No, that's all Sure you'll see her this evening."

"Oh, certain."

"And you'll get a chance to speak to her when there is no one around?"

"Oh, dead sure. You see, I'm her husband!"

"Baby Mine" fainted, and was sent to his home in a hack.

A Masher.

Just before a Western-bound train left the Union depot, a masher with his little grip-sack slid around to a woman standing near the ticket office and remarked;

"Excuse me, but can I be of any assistance in purchasing your ticket?"

"No, sir!" was the short reply.

"Beg pardon, but I shall be glad to see that your trunk is properly checked," he continued.

"It has been checked, sir."

"Yes—ahem—you go West, I presume?"

"I do."

"Going as far as Chicago?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah—yes—to Chicogo. I also take the train for Chicago. Beg your pardon, but did't I meet you in Buffalo last fall?"

"No, sir!"

"Ah! Then it was in Syracuse?"

"No, sir!"

"No? I wonder where I have seen you before!"

"You saw me enter the depot about five minutes ago with my husband, I presume!"

"Your husband?"

"Yes, sir, and if you'll only stay around here three minutes longer you'll make the fifth fellow of your kind that he has turned over to the coroner this month!"

Some masher would have made a run for it, but this one didn't. He went off on the gallop, and as he wanted to go light he left his grip-sack and a ton of brass behind him.

Mad Doctors.

A few days ago an elegantly dressed lady called on one of the best known mad doctors in Paris, and in a voice broken with sobs exclaimed; "Doctor, you are my only hope now. My poor son is a monomaniac; he is quite harmless: his idee fixe is that he is a cashier in bank, and to everybody he meets he presents a bill or account and demands payment. He has already got himself and me into serious difficulties, and I don't know what to do." And here the tears began to course each other down the fair pleader's cheeks. The doctor did his best to cheer the unhappy mother, asked her various questions, and finally gave some hope of curing the boy. She dried her tears, and said she would leave her son in his hands. "I will bring him to you to-morrow; but oh! doctor, the separation will be cruel," Next morning she appeared with the boy. "Tell your master," she said to the servant who opened the door, "that the person he expects is here," and, taking a parcel from her son's hands, told him to wait a few minutes. She then retired by a side entrance which the doctor had shown her, and had advised her to pass in order to avoid a mournful, and, perhaps, exciting farewell with her son. Quarter of an hour passed, the Doctor entered the waiting room, and the young man presented his account. "Quite right, my lad, I will settle it with you directly," and he felt the young man's pulse. "Normal pulse" says the man of science. "My account," says the young man, "my master will be uneasy; please give me the money at once." But the doctor gazed fixedly at him, and tried to feel his pulse. "Let go!" exclaimed the monomaniac, getting into a passion. "Pay me at once, and don't make a fool of yourself."

"Violent attack," says the doctor calmly, and he pulled the bell rope rather violently. "The shower bath," he explained to his two attendants; and in a twinkle the young man was stripped, and a stream of ice-cold water pouring over him.

He howled, he kicked, but uselessly. When the doctor came to see the effect of the operation, he was much surprised to find his patient madder than ever; vowing vengeance at one moment, and the next imploring his torturers to send to a jeweler in the Rue de la Paix and ask him to come and release him. When the doctor heard the word "jeweler" a light broke upon him. He dispatched an attendant to the Rue de la Paix, and in a few minutes the jeweler appeared upon the scene. He turned somewhat pale when matters were explained to him, for he saw himself robbed of 25,000 francs by a most ingenious chevallier d'industrie. She had chosen jewelry to that amount, but not having the money with her she had said; Let your clerk come with me; I live in the Avenue d'Evlau, and my husband will pay the account."

The Size of It.

A citizen had had occasion to consult a lawyer regarding a suit which he contemplated instituting, but of the definite outcome of which he was in doubt. He did not wish to pay a retaining fee, because he was uncertain of winning. The attorney said he would accept a contingent fee. The party met Mr. Burleigh some time afterward and asked him the definition of a contingent fee.

"A contingent fee," jocosely said Mr Burleigh, is this: "If a lawyer loses the case he gets nothing. If he wins you get nothing."

"But," said the perplexed party, scratching his head, "I can't say that I exactly comprehend you."

"I thought I was quite clear," said Mr. Burleigh, who repeated what he had said.

"But it seems that I don't get anything in either event," said the man, when his intellect had fully grasped the situation.

"Well, that is about the size of a contingent fee." replied Mr. Burleigh, terminating the conversation.

A Sponge Bath.

It was not in McFadden's drug store that a young and sprightly school teacher last week addressed the clerk:

"I would like a sponge bath."

"Ah, oh, a—will you please repeat, I did not quite understand you?" stammered the clerk.

"I would like a good sponge bath," again demanded the customer, while a pair of sharp gray eyes, beaming with wonder and impatience, made him tremble.

More dead than alive he managed to tell his fair visitor his inability to catch her meaning.

"Well, I never! If this isn't queer! I think I speak intelligently enough. I—want—you—to—give—me—a—good—sponge—bath."

At this moment the proprietor whispered:

"She wants a bath sponge."

At the same moment she comprehended the trouble and fled from the store before she could be recognized by any one, but too late! A gentleman raised his hat to her, passed in and all was discovered.

He who frets is never the one who mends, heals, who repairs evils; more he discourages, enfeebles, and too often disables those around him, who, but for the gloom and the depression of his company, would do good work and keep up brave cheer. And when the fretter is one who is beloved, whose nearness of relation to us makes his fretting even at the weather seem almost like a personal reproach to us, then the misery of it becomes indeed insupportable.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Governor,
ROBERT E. PATTISON,
OF PHILADELPHIA.

For Lieutenant Governor,
CHAUNCEY F. BLACK,
OF YORK.

For Judge of the Supreme Court,
SILAS M. CLARK,
OF INDIANA.

For Secretary of Internal Affairs,
J. SIMPSON AFRICA,
OF HUNTINGDON.

For Congressman-at-Large,
MORTIMER F. ELLIOTT, OF TIOGA.

THE Democratic State Convention which met at Harrisburg on the 28th ul timo did its work most nobly. A better or stronger ticket never was presented to the people of Pennsylvania for her suffrages. Pattison, of Philadelphia, for Governor; Black, of York, for Lieutenant Governor; Clark, of Indiana, for Supreme Judge; Africa, of Huntingdon, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, and Elliott, of Tioga, for Congreseman-at-Large, present a combination of personal and collective strength such as is seldom the good fortune of any bolitical convention to nominate.

The race for Governor was very close between Hopkins and Pattison—the former leading off up to the sixth ballot when fortunately Pattison was nominated. We say fortunat ely, for Pattison will prove a much stronger candidate than any other man that could have been named.

The other candidates are most excellent and worthy men,—every one of them. They have all given ample proof of their fitness for the several positions for which they are selected. Not one of them is a boss or ring-master, but all enjoy the respect and confidence of the people for eminent abilities and the sterling qualities of honesty and integrity.

The convention itself was composed of the best material in the party—men who thoroughly understand the situation, the demands, the dangers and hopes of the present, instead of burrowing for political glory in the dead and burried past. There were no bosses to dictate nominations, no sectional or personal ambition to satisfy. All worked together for the common good.

With thorough organization and effective work, the entire ticket will be triumphantly elected.

THE PLATFORM.

Strong Protest Against Bossism and the Spoils System.

The Democratic party of Pennsylvania, holding fast to the faith that all power not delegated by the Constitution is reserved to the States and the people, upholding the sanctity of personal liberty, the security of private property and the right of local self-government demanding honesty and economy in the administration of the government and the enforcement of all the provisions of the Constitution by the Legislature and the courts of the Commonwealth, declaring against monopolies and in sympathy with labor seeking its protection, and in favor of the industrial interests of Pennsylvania, at this time do solemnly protest against evils which the policy and practices of the Republican party and the insolence of its long possession of office have thus brought upon the country; therefore.

FIRST. We do protest against what is called the Boss system and also the plundering of office-holders by assessments of money for political purposes. Public offices are the property of no party, but are open to every citizen, honest, capable and faithful to the Constitution, qualifications which Jefferson declared were the requisites for office.

SECOND. We protest against the spoils system. It is a prostitution of the offices of the people so that they become the mere perquisites of the politicians.

THIRD. We denounce all repudiation, State and Federal, because it is dishonest and destructive of that public morality upon which are founded the existence and perpetuity of our free institutions. It should be made odious, and the politician that aids it and abets it with office deserves public condemnation.

FOURTH. We denounce spoliation of the State Treasury and immunity by pardon of those convicted of crimes whose acts are flagrant supervisions of official trusts and wrongs done the people.

FIFTH. We believe the Republican party, as now organized and controlled, is based on fraud force and corruption, and there can be no hope of true reform except by the force of the ballot-box excluding it from place and power.

SIXTH. The Democratic party demands of the Legis ature an honest, just and true aportionment.

SEVENTH. Upon these declarations we invite the co-operation of all honest citizens who, with us, desire the re-establishment of honest government.

SKETCH OF THE CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

How Robert Emory Pattison in a Few Years Has Risen to Fame.

Only four and a half years have elapsed since the man who was nominated yesterday to govern more than four millions of people, and who was then only twenty-seven years of age, left a small law practice to become Controller of the city of Philadelphia, having been elected by a majority of 1,962 votes over James W. Sayre. Before then he was unknown to the public. Three years later the novelty of having a Controller who really controlled and who stood sternly and immovably between the public jobber and the City Treasury had made Robert Emory Pattison so popular in Philadelphia that in all the partisan excitement of the Presidential election, which resulted in a majority here of 20,833 for Garfield and of 21,776 for William E. Littleton, Republican candidate for Clerk of the Quarter Session, the Democratic candidate for Controller was re-elected by 93,461 votes, or a majority of 13,593 over one of Philadelphia's most esteemed citizens and successful merchant—E. Harper Jeffries, whom the combined ring managers had prevailed upon to sacrifice himself, after they had forced off the ticket an equally estimable candidate—Joel Cook.

Mr. Pattison will not be thirty-two years of age until the 8th of next December, having been born in 1850, at Quantico, a village near Snow Hill, in Somerset county, Maryland. His father, the Rev. Robert H. Pattison, who died seven years ago, was a popular Methodist minister, who graduated from Dickinson College in the same class with the Rev. O. H. Tiffany, now pastor of the Arch Street M. E. Church. The family came to Philadelphia when the candidate for Governor was six years of age, his father taking charge of Ausbury M. E. Church, Chestnut street, west of Thirty-third. Young Robert's early educational training in the public schools was frequently and disagreeably interruped by the yearly change of residence that his father, as a Methodist minister, was obliged to make. From the Penn Grammar School, at Mary and Master streets, he was admitted to the High School, from which he graduated after a four years' course, delivering the valedictory at the commencement." At that time Lewis C. Cassidy was a member of the Board of Education and happened to be on the look-out for a bright youth to study law in his office. Like many other business and professional men, before and since, who had such a need, Mr. Cassidy told Professor George Inman Riche, principle of the High School, the kind of young man he wanted and Mr. Riche unhesitatingly recommended "Bob" Pattison. The youth was then preparing to enter Dickinson College and study for the ministry, but he accepted Mr. Cassidy's offer and studied diligently under him until 1862, when he was admitted to the bar.

Meanwhile, as a member of the Fourth Regiment of militia, known as the Fire Zouaves young Pattison was brought into some public prominence by his able and successful defence of a lot of his fellow-members who were court-martialed for insubordination. After that whenever the command wanted an orator they got Mr. Pattison. His first appearance in the political field was in 1875, when his friends tried to have him nominated for Clerk of the Quarter Sessions, but Henry S. Hagert was chosen. In August, 1877, three months before his first election as Controller, his name was before the Democratic State Convention for the Auditor Generalship. On the first ballot Mr. Pattison stood next to William P. Schell but the latter was nominated on the secon dby a large majority. A month or so after this, when Mr. Pattison's legal preceptor met him at the corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets suggested that he ought to be a candidate for Controller, Mr. Pattison said he thought he had enough of politics. He was prevailed upon to run, however, and his opportunity was a good one, for the notorious administration of Controllor Hancock, whom a Judge on the bench characterized as "Ceberus gorged to moral blindness," had given impetus to the political tidal wave that carried into office a Democratic District Attorney, Controller and Coroner, in face of a majority in the city of from five thousand to six thousand for Auditor General, State Treasurer and Supreme Judge.

Mr. Pattison began performing the duties of Controller on January 1, 1878. The ability and fidelity that proved too much for the confederate jobbers at the end of his first term are well known to everbody, and the following figures of the election of November, 1880, show how they were rewarded at a time when the committee of one hundred was only budding and could not give him anything like the support which, three months later, elected King and Hunter. The figures show the vote for city officers, except Coroner, in comparison with the Presidential vote:

PRESIDENT	Garfield, R.,..... 97,239	Maj., 20,883
	Hancock, D.,..... 76,356
DISTRICT ATTORNEY	Graham, R.,..... 96,974	Maj., 20,566
	Hagert, D.,..... 76,408
CONTROLLER	Jeffries, R.,..... 79,868
	Pattison, D.,..... 93,461	Maj., 13,593
CLERK Q. S.	Littleton, R.,..... 97,587	Maj., 21,776
	Freeman, D.,..... 74,811

Mr. Pattison lives in modest style at 3247 Sansom street. During the summer he has his family in an Atlantic City cottage. He comes up from the seashore every morning and returns in the evening after his day's work in the City Hall. He was at his desk all day yesterday, as usual, and returned to Atlantic City before the wires brought the news that he had been nominated. In person he is tall, broad-shouldered and wiry, straight as an Indian, dark featured, keen of eye, determined in look and generally handsome—just the man in physical appearance to win favor on the stump at first sight.

Pen Pictures of the Candidates.

The democratic ticket is composed of men who will stand photographing, and make excellent pictures. Three are brunettes of the most pronounced type with black eyes and hair—Pattison, Africa and Elliott. Clark is smooth shaven and light complexioned, while Black is a demiblonde, with a sparkling of grey hair peeping out above his ears. None of the candidates have a "bar'l." They are what may be called men in comfortable circumstances. Clark is worth about $50,000, enjoys a good law practice, and Western Pennsylvania swears by him. Pattison has saved the big end of his four years salary as controller, and has a windfall of $30,000, and, for a young man who has been blessed by fortitous occurrences is able to live easily without indulging in extravangances. Chauncey Black gains a livelih od by that rather precarious instrument, the pen, and lacks money. J. Simpson Africa has a good business as a civil engineer, but is not counted as in more than moderately circumstances, and Elliott is moderate well off. Three of the candidates are each nearly six feet in height. Africa is of medium height, and the congressman-at-large is about five feet five inches. Elliott is the br other-in-law of Major Merrick, the one legged candidate of the independents for secretary of internal affairs, and resides in the same town—Wellsboro. Four of the five are lawyers, Africa being the exception, although Chauncey Black early forsook the practice of the law for what was to him the more pleasant pursuits of literature. This, therefore, makes fourteen of the bar out of fifteen candidates before the people on the three tickets. Pattison is a temperate man, although not a radical upon the subject The candidates are young men in the limited acceptance of the term. Pattison is 32 years of age; Elliott, 39; Black, 42; Africa, 45; and Clark, 53. Three of the five can make good stump speeches, and only one, Pattison, has held any office of account. Africa was deputy secretary of internal affairs under General McCandless.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

THE EXECUTION.

The Assassin's Last Words.

When Guiteau came out into the rotunda from his cell, he looked calm and composed but very pale. His arms were pinioned behind him and he held his head erect. He gazed upon the crowd without flinching. He wore a black suit of clothes, and instead of a collar, had a hankerchief thrown loosely about his neck. Those who expected "sickening and distressing scenes" were disappointed. Guiteau walked firmly through the rotunda and the court. He stumbled on one of the steps leading up to the scaffold, but recovered himself immediately. When he began to read, his voice was loud and firm. He gave the words now and then a sort of singing inflection like a preacher reading a hymn.

The attendants then pinioned his legs, placed the noose over his head and carefully adjusted it about his neck. Mr. Strong placed the black cap over his head, and as he did so Guiteau called out in loud tones: "Glory, glory, glory!" Instantly the spring was touched, the drop fell, and at twenty minutes to one Guiteau swung in the air. The body turned around, but there was not the slightest perceptible movement of the limbs or any evidence of a conscious effort to move them. When the drop fell a yell was sent up by some person inside the jail. This was echoed outside by the voices of a thousand or more people, who hurrahed lustily. There was a general onslaught by the populace upon the door which was so powerful that the officers were unable to withstand it. Hundreds of the people crowded into the office, and there was a terrible crush at the doors. For at least forty seconds after the drop fell the body hung motionless; then there was a slight motion of the shoulders and legs, due to muscular contraction. Three minutes after the drop fell the body was lowered to be examined by the physicians. There was a decided action of the heart fully fourteen minutes and the pulse fluttered two minutes longer. When the body had hung with the feet just touching the ground for over half an hour, it was lowered into the coffin, which was waiting for it under the scaffold. The physicians decided at once that the neck had been broken. When the body was lowered the black cap was removed and the face exposed. The features were pallid and composed. About the mouth there was considerable moisture. After the body had been arranged in the coffin Warden Crocker ascended the steps of the scaffold and addressing the crowd which was kept back from the scaffold by a line of officers, said, "Those who desired could pass along the side of the scaffold and view the body."

—Knarr & Luse are building a large addition to the Millheim foundry, to be used as a work shop for wood work.

—Miss Emma Haas, of Mifflinburg, was in town last and this week visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Mauck.

—Frank Miller and John Luse painted Nittany Valley last week—or at least a good part of it.

—Mifflinburgers are delighted over the prospects of a rail road from their town to Mr. Gast's extensive timber forests about four miles distant.

—Neighbor D. A. Musser proved "what he knows about farming" by bringing in a timothy stalk 4 feet 6½ inches long. Beat it if you can.

—Our farmers are having excellent hay weather this week, and large quantities of the precious crop have already been made in the best condition.

—W. A. Tobias, Esq., has been making Millheim his headquarters for the last few weeks. He still has a warm heart for the old place.

—Mr. McNeven and lady of New York City arrived in town last week, and expect to spend part of the summer in this valley and are stopping at Musser's hotel.

—The state of the weather on the glourious 4th was not at all favorable to the full development of the "spirit of '76", and more common spirits were therfore substituted in many cases.

—From this time out we will call Jim Smith a clever fellow and a real kind neighbor. He has constructed a new, substantial side walk along the JOURNAL OFFICE front.

—The administrators of Adam Zerby, deceased, will offer some valuable property at public sale on Saturday Aug 5th. See notice in an other column and sale bills. ts.

—Rev. E. D. Keen. of Beavertown, Snyder co unty, is here on a visit to the old home and friends. "Man" seems to flourish on Snyder county soil like a green tree. He is the very picture of health.

LUTE GOES HEAD.—Last week our friend Luther B. Frank brought a wheat stalk to our office measuring 6 feet 6 inches in length, with a fine large head. It is a new variety called Pattison, and pro mises to be very productive and popular.

—The Lutheran Ladies' Mite Society had its sixth monthly meeting Monday evening 3rd inst. The attendance was very full and much interest was manifested. Seve ral new members joined and quite a number of honorary members were elected. The society though only six months old, already has the respectable sum of $16.52 in its treasury.

LEWIN,—of the Philadelphia Branch Clothing Store, is one of the most accommodating merchants one can meet. He will cheerfully show his goods, even if you do not buy. But you will almost surely return aud buy at the Branch, after having priced goods elsewhere. Clothing, hats and caps and gents' furnishing goods of every grade and price cheaper than the cheapest.

—During our stay in Lock Haven on the fourth we stopped at the Irvin House, of which the Hon. S. Woods Caldwell is the proprietor. The house was filled with guests, but as usual the efficiency of its genial landlord made them all feel at home and well cared for. Under such management a hotel can't fail to win the patronage of the traveling public.

—Ah yes, the dear ladies know just how and when to do a real genuine act of kind ness. But for the ladies—God bless them—all love, refinement, culture, yea, civilization itself, would soon vanishfrom the face of the earth" These were some of our thoughts as we gratefully viewed the finest dish of strawberries ever presented to apoor printer. Mrs. D. A. Musser was the thoughtful doner. Thanks.

—Messrs. S. K. Sankey & Co,, have our thanks for a bottle of ALKALINE, a toothwash manufactured by these gentlemen. —Our Town Council will have their regular monthly meeting next Monday evening.

—Miss Mary Strohm takes this opportunity to inform the citizens of Millheim and vicinity that she will again open a school on Tuesday, July 25th, next, and kindly solicits the continued patronage of the public. 5t

"HE DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED."—Early on Monday morning Wallace Kerstetter, one our young men, was amusing himself, with a pistol in Spigelmyer's store. Of course he did not know it was loaded, but it was, and discharged its contents through Wallaces' hand. The wound is not dangerous, though painful.

Young men are a little slow to learn that pistols are not exactly the best toy to play with.

EXTENSIVE CARRIAGE WORKS.—John S. Fisher's Carriage Shops, one mile west of Rebersburg take the lead in this county for the finest and most fashionable Buggies, Carriages and Family Wagons. He keeps the Dexter Queen, Timken, Vanderbilt styles constantly on hand and makes it a point to turn out the best finished wagons in the country. Try him and you will be satisfied and pleased with his excellent work. 2t

The election in Iowa on the 27th ult., on the adoption of an amendment to the constitution, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, resulted in faver of the amendment by a majority of about 40 000. It seems that the prohibitary idea is growing, especially in the west, and other states are soon expected to follow the lead of Kansas and Iowa.

—We had the pleasure of a call last week, by Mr. John A. Woodward, who is a candidate for legislature, as will be seen by formal announcement in another column. Mr. Woodward resides near Howard and is a farmer from choice. Besides farming he edits with much ability the Agricultural Epitomist a semi-monthly journal published at Watsontown. Mr. Woodward is a gentleman of information and culture, well versed in the political history of the country, and a positive and thorough Democrat besides.

—Some business men think it does not pay to advertise, while others think it does. Among the latter is the extensive and popular Bee Hive Dry Goods house of Lock Haven. The JOURNAL has advertised the Bee Hive regularly for the last six years, and the enterprising proprietors feel satisfied that it pays them well for every dollar thus expended. There is no store in Lock Haven that is so well known to the people of the valleys as the Bee Hive—none that does so large and regular a trade to this part of Centre county. 2t

—This week it falls to onr lot to announce the departure of two of our aged fathers into the eternal world—John Bierly, of Brush Valley and Geo. Harter, of Millheim. Both were men of spotless character and reputation, prominent and active members of the Christian church.

They were excellent types of that sturdy, industrious, plain and honest class of people so well and favorable known as Pennsylvania Germans. After long lives well spent they go down to their graves respected by the entire community.

May they rest in peace.

SAD CASE OF SUICIDE.—On Wednesday morning the 5th inst. our community was startled by the shocking news that Mr. Thomas Hosterman, a widely-known and a prominent citizen of Haines township, had committed suicide. The report, at first somewhat discredited, soon proved only too true. In the morning of the sad day the family were up early. Mr. Hosterman left the house under pretext of attending to some workat the barn. Not returning when breakfast was waiting, one of his daughters went out to see what detained him, and was horror stricken to find him in the barn with his jugular vein cut, bleeding to death. With a common pocket knife he had committed the dreadful act.

For some time past Mr. Hosterman had suffered under a disturbed state of mind and was frequently very much depressed. He was in good circumstances and surrounded by a highly respectable family who has the deepest sympathies of the entire community.

The remains of decedent were buried in the new cemetery at Woodward, on Thursday following. Rev. P. C. Weidemyer preached in English and Rev. E. Stambach in German, to the large concourse of people that had assembled.

Mr. Hosterman was in the 66th year of his age.

—We call the attention of our readers to the large, new advertisement of the Bee Hive Dry Goods Store at Lock Haven, J. F. Everett & Co., proprietors. This is one of the largest, best-known and most successful business houses in this part of the state. The Bee Hive does an immense business, extending throughout Clinton county and into large portions of Centre, Cameron and Elk. The elements which insure such large results are—strict business integrity; a thorough knowledge of the trade; the widest possible range in grade and price of goods and the fullest assortment at all seasons; the lowest, uniform prices to all; competent and obliging salesmen and judicious and liberal advertising. This is a combination of points that can not be surpassed anywhere. 2

News Miscellany.

A Lancaster county little girl died suddenly from excessive rope jumping.

The man Whipple, who was recently shot at East Lewisburg, in an endeaver to arrest him, has since died. He seems to have been the head of a gang of robbers.

Houtzdale had a brutal prize fight the other week. Two fellows named Reese pummeled each other fearfully in the presence of a large crowd of men and boys, without an attempt by the officers of the law to interfere. What a shame on all concerned.

Doesn't Know His Own Children.

A Charlotteville correspondent tells of a Simmins Gap patriarch who is now living with his ninth wife. Three hundred of his descendants were present at a recent family reunion. He has fifty-three children. He don't know all of his own children, as they won't consent to be branded, and as for his grandchildren none but a Napoleonic memory of faces would be able to recognize them. The old gentleman is but a little past eighty years of age.

Bitten By a Beheaded Reptile.

Mr. Jack Helton, workman for the Chestatee Company, killed a large rattlesnake last week by cutting it in two leaving a foot or more with the head Mr. Helton undertook to examine the fangs of the serpent with a short stick and was struck by the snake, or what was left of it, and its fang came in contact with his hand, since which time the hand has been badly swollen and throwing Mr. Heltman into spasms. There is some chance for the bite to result fatally.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

One Hundred Excursionists Reported Drowned in a Steamboat Collision.

PITTSBURG, July 4.

Intelligence is just received here that the steamer Scioto, with an excursion party on board, collided with a towboat near Mingo Junction, Ohio.

One hundred persons are reported drowned. Telegraphic facilities are meagre, but additional facts will be forwarded as soon as possible.

Rum the Cause of the Scioto Disaster.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—Five more bodies have been recovered from the wreck of the Scioto at Mingo Junction. Today a diver from Cincinnati went into the hold, but found no bodies. He states that there is a very swift current running, and that in all probability the bodies of the victims are now miles below the wreck. The list of missing as revised to midnight to-night foots up 41 from Wellsville and 22 from East Liverpool, with 8 from other points. It is practically settled that whisky was at the bottom of the disaster, as some of the officers and many passengers had freely circulated the bottle before the collision and were drunk at the time.

AGRICULTURE.

WHAT A PINT OF MANURE DID.—A Wisconsin farmer sends this experience: "Last year, in hauling yard manure across a field afterwards planted to corn, some of it scattered off in driblets—from a handful to a pint or so in a place. When planting the corn, I found portions of these droppings, and where noticed, drew them into the hills and with the hoe mixed them a little with the soil as the seed was dropped. In three instances where a large handful or about a pint of the manure was thus put in, a stick was driven down to mark the hills. When hoeing, we noticed that in these hills the corn plants had started off more vigorously, were greener, and at the third hoeing they were 6 to 12 inches higher than the other hills adjoining. Our curiosity being awakened we followed up the observations, and when gathering the crop, each of the three stalks in the three hills, had two large plump ears, while the surrounding corn did not average one good ear to the stalk. This set us to thinking and figuring. That bit of manure had given the young corn roots a vigorous start just as good feed starts off a young calf, or pig, or lamb, and the roots penetrated further in every direction and gathered more food and moisture. These stalks being better nourished from below, ran far away from the poorly fed neighbors. As to the figures, the rows were 3½ feet apart, and the hills three feet distant in the rows, say 4,000 hills on an acre, and 4,000 pints of manure is about 62½ bushels, or two large wagon loads. Anybody can reckon the difference between six large, well filled ears of corn on each hill, and less than 3 per hill, and the cost of the manure as compared with the total value of the final crop. The plowing, and the seed, and the hoeing, amount to the same in each case. All I have to say is, that every corn hill planted on my farm this year will have at least a pint of manure in it.

APPLE POMACE AS A MANURE.—Apple pomace, as well as the leaves of the tree, if spread thickly on the land while in a green state, will destroy all vegetation beneath them. When put into large heaps they have been known to kill trees. Their deleterious effects upon vegetation are not because they do not contain any fertilizing properties but because they contain, while in a green state, too great a proportion of acid for their other ingredients. They also pack so closely together as to exclude both air and light, without which vegetable growth cannot long exist. Some years ago I mulched, pretty heavily, some strawberry plants with about half-dried cherry and apple tree leaves, with a view to protect them during wintar. The result was the death of nearly all my plants by spring, and the land remained sour most of the following summer. If apple pomace be put in a heap and exposed to the frost of winter, and in the spring incorporated with some dry straw or corn cobs, with a small portion of unslacked lime, and again left exposed to the summer suns, by fall the acid will be mostly exhausted, and the compost makes an excellent top dressing for winter wheat. It may be used to advantage during winter as a top dressing for meadows or other grass land. It should not be used until the acid has evaporated. For the destruction of any of the varieties of Linaria (wild flax), yarrow, milfoil or any other noxious perenniel plant, I know of nothing better than a liberal application of salt. Salt, when used sparingly on growing crops, somewhat distant from the seacost, is an excellent fertilizer. When used in large quantities it becomes a speedy exterminator of vegetable matter. It also puts the land into excellent condition for future crops.

RAISING THE SUNFLOWER FOR ITS SEED.—For a year or two the subject of feeding the seed of sunflowers to fowls has been referred to in poultry journals frequently with approval, and we have seen no word in opposition. Although this flower, if it can be so called, has come into favor even among ladies and some pantaloon creatures who are said to be of male gender, it is by no means an attractive floral attribute. It is something among flowers that the elephant is among beasts, huge and uncouth. Still if it possesses the merit of producing wholesome food for the feathered tribe, it is to that extent so much beyond flowers in solid value. But it being proved that it is a plant of more or less value for its seed, and being very hardy in its nature, it substitutes usefulness for beauty; and as it will grow in every out-of-the-way corner and place, where scarcely anything else can be cultivated, it can be honestly recommended to the keeper of fowls to appropriate such plots of ground to the raising of it for its seed. It would not require much space to produce from 3 to five bushels of seed, which would be a substantial addition to the winter season's supply of chicken-food.

THE TUBEROSE AND GLADIOLUS.—These bulbs have been produced of late years in such quantities that they are now sold at prices which bring them within the reach of all. The Tuberose, so valued for its fragrance, is often injured by being planted too early. The first of May is soon enough to start the bulbs; they may be planted in pots or boxes of soil, and placed in the green house, or in a warm room, and they will be sufficiently advanced to be planted in the open ground by the last of May or the early part of June. They should have a warm, rich spot, and the flower stalk, as it develops, be supported by a slender stake. The Gladiolus, on the other hand, is almost hardy. It affords a wide range of colors, and a bed of them is very showy. Mixed, unnamed bulbs, can be bought at a much less price than the named kinds. They should be planted a foot apart with the top of the bulb at least two inches below the surface. It is well to plant a portion of the bulbs every two weeks until the first halt of June to insure a continuous bloom. It is well to stake the flower stalks to keep them from being broken down by the wind just as they are in their prime.

CARE OF PASTURES.—A good permanent pasture, handy to the barnyard, is very convenient, almost a necessity, on every well regulated farm. Such a field needs to be well fertilized and cared for, that it may give the best return in an abundant supply of green food, for farm stock. A top-dressing of fine, well-rotted manure in winter is excellent, but if not done, a dressing of 50 to 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre may be applied. It is best to sow this just before a shower, that the rain may carry this very soluble food to the roots of the plants. After supplying the necessary fertilizers, it is important not to overstock the pasture. Let the adjustment between the number of animals and the capacity of the field be such, that there may be good feeding throughout the whole season. If such a pasture has a natural spring, its value is much increased. The next to this is a well, provided with a windmill, for raising an abundant supply of water.

THOSE who use lime as a fertilizer apply from ten to fifty bushels to the acre; ashes may be applied at the same rate, salt at the rate of two hundred to four hundred pounds, and plaster at the rate of one hundred pounds.

DOMESTIC.

ROYAL CORN BREAD.—Make a pint of batter of two-thirds nice corn meal and one-third coarse flour stirred in water; let it stand in a warm place until it ferments well; then add warm water, two or three spoonfuls or molasses, a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of soda, or enough to correct the acidity, then thicken with corn meal and coarse flour, in the same proportion as at first, making the batter about the same consistency as for griddle cakes; oil your baking dish and fill about half full, always have about a pint of the batter to start with again. Place the loaf in a steamer and steam it two hours for a two-quart loaf, and bake it in the oven about thirty minutes to brown it. The same recipe may be used for griddle cakes.

AN excellent plan to save old napkins and table-cloths is to cut out the good parts and put them away in a bag, appropriately labeled, and have them ready for use in case of sickness. A house-wife whose system is so complete that it is hard to believe that she has lived on earth only about forty years gives this advice, and she says also that we should keep another bag with pieces of flannel, and another with old cotton cloth, for the same purpose.

FRENCH OMELETTE.—Take four eggs, separate the yolks from the whites, beat the white to a snow on a dinner plate; then beat the yolks in a small basin with sugar to taste, then add a small pinch of baking soda and three large tablespoonfuls of flour, and milk enough to make a thin batter; then pour into an omelette-pan, previously heated and greased, spread the white over the top. Fire by holding high above the fire till set brown on the top; double over and serve hot with jam.

ORANGE JELLY.—Peel twelve large oranges; cut them into small pieces, and squeeze them thoroughly through a linen bag. To one pint of juice add one pound of sugar; when the sugar is dissolved put it over the fire; dissolve two ounces of isinglass in just hot water enough to cover it, and add it to the jelly as it begins to boil. Let it boil very fast for twenty minutes. Put it hot into the jars, and tie it up with papers dipped in brandy. Lemon jelly may be made in the same way, only to one pint of juice add two pounds of sugar.

PEANUT CANDY.—One scant pint of molasses, four quarts of peanuts, measured before they are shelled, two tablespoonfuls of vanilla, one teaspoonful of soda. Boil the molasses until it hardens, in cold water, when dropped from the spoon. Stir in the vanilla, then the soda, dry. Lastly, the shelled peanuts. Turn out into shallow dishes well buttered, and press it down smooth with a wooden spoon.

ORANGEADE.—Pour a pint of boiling water over a sliced orange. When cold strain it, and sweeten it to suit the palate. Another way: Squeeze the juice from six oranges and two lemons into a quart of boiling water, then slice them and put them in with the juice. Pour the fluid frequently and quickly from one jug to another, and strain it,

OAT MEAL PUDDING.—Mix two heaping tablespoonfuls in a half teacupful of milk, sweeten to taste and stir over the fire for ten minutes; then put in a half teacupful of fine bread crumbs, one-half teacup of finely shred suet, and two well-beaten eggs. Stir together well, season with lemon or nutmeg. Put into a buttered pudding dish, and bake one hour.

MACAROONS.—Pulverize one pound of sweet almonds quite fine with the whites of four eggs; add two and a half pounds of sugar and rub them well together; put in by degrees ten more whites, working them well as you put them in; put the mixture into a biscuit funnel and lay them out on water paper in pieces about the size of a walnut; put three or four pieces of almonds cut into thin slips on each, and bake them on a baking plate in a slow oven one-half hour.

HASH made of two parts potato, one part corn beef and one part beets is an appetizing dish for breakfast. The potatoes and beets should be boiled the day before; chop them and the beef fine; season with butter, pepper and salt, and some hot vinegar and mustard may be added if you choose.

ROAST PIGEON.—Wipe them quite dry, truss them, and season them inside with pepper and salt, and put a piece of butter the size of a walnut in each. Put them down to a sharp fire and baste them all the time they are cooking. They will take about half an hour. Garnish them with white parsley and serve with a tureen of bread sauce.

A DELICIOUS fish sauce is made of half a cup of butter, one tablespoonful of parsley chopped very fine, a little salt, and pepper, and the juice of two small lemons, or of one large one. Warm the butter a little so that you can easily beat it to a cream, then mix with the other ingredients, putting the parsley in last, just before sending it to the table.

AN excellent way to warm a roast of beef is to put it in a kettle, and cover the meat with very thin slices of onions. Scatter pepper and salt over them, put in a lump of butter, and just enough water to keep the meat from burning; let it warm slowly on the back part of the stove, and then move it forward and let the onions cook.

GATEAUX MADELEINES.—One pound of sugar, sixteen eggs, half pound of butter, three quarters pound of best flour. Beat the eggs and the sugar together in a bowl; when done mix in the flour, then the butter. Put the paste in small moulds and bake in a warm oven.

PRUNE PUDDING.—One-half pound of prunes boiled soft and thick; remove the stones and sweeten well; then add the whites of six eggs beaten stiff; chop the prunes fine; then stir in the eggs; put into a dish and bake a light brown. Serve with sweetened cream.

CODFISH STEWED.—Boil a piece of codfish, but do not overdo it. Pick out the flesh in flakes, put them in a saucepan with a piece of butter, pepper and salt to taste, some minced parsley and the juice of a lemon; with a dust of cayenne. Put it on the fire till quite hot, and serve.

EGGS IN THE SHELL.—Put them into boiling water; take them off the fire; cover them five minutes to allow them to set; then take them out of the water and serve in a folded napkin.

ORANGE AND APPLE PRESERVE.—Peel some oranges and simmer them until tender. Then cut them into slices; remove the seeds and put them into jelly pots. Now prepare some apple jelly and pour it over them, so as to fill the pots.

HUMOROUS.

IT is reported of one of the great capitalists of Gotham that once upon a time he found an article in one of the dailies which rather peeled the man off in spots and he called in his confidential secretary and said:

"James, go out and see what the Daily Plaster can be bought for: I'll buy it and throw everything into the bay!"

James went out on the errand and returned and reported the price at $700,000.

"Too much—too much!" replied the magnate. "James go out and see what it will cost me to start an opposition daily."

James sallied forth to get the figure, and on his return reported that half a million dollars would perhaps run one for a year or so.

"Too much—too infernal much!" was the decided reply. "James, go out and buy a dollar bouquet and send it to the editor with my compliments. ——'m, James,——'m! if revenge costs that much money we've got to knuckle and let him take the track."

Fear Not.

All kidney and urinary complaints, especially Bright's Disease, Diabetes and Liver troubles, Hop Bitters will surely and lastingly cure. Cases exactly like your own have been cured in your own neighborhood, and you can find reliable proof at home of what Hop Bitters has and can do.

THERE is a perceptible coolness between young Seabury, one of the fashionable young men in Austin, and Gilhooly. Seabury owns a horse which he thinks is the finest horse in the world. Young Seabury was bragging about his horse to a crowd of acquaintances the other day, and he said, among other important things, that the horse was so fast on the previous day that he overtook a swallow, the horse's ear striking the bird. "Are you sure the swallow was not coming from the opposite direction?" asked Gilhooly, with the air of a man who wanted to know. "Of course not," was the indignant response. "I reckon then that the swallow wanted to build her nest in your horse's ear. The horse went so slow the swallow could not see he was moving. Wonderful horse.

If You Are Sick, Read

the Kidney-Wort advertisement in another column, and it will explain to you the rational method of getting well. Kidney-Wort will save you more doctor's bills than any other medicine known. Acting with specific energy on the kidneys and liver, it cures the worst diseases caused by their derangement. Use it at once. In dry and liquid form. Either is equally efficient, the liquid is the easiest, but the dry is the most economical.—Interior.

"WHEN you were last here," said the Magistrate to the prisoner, "you promised me that if I released you you would go to work. Why haven't you kept your word?" "Judge," returned the victim, meekly, "I didn't want to be breading any disturbance, and I was afraid if I went to work that I would get on a strike."

A MONTREAL paper mixed up an account of mission progress in Africa and a receipt to make tomato catsup, viz: "They (the missionairs) are accustomed to begin their work by buying heathen children and educating them. The easiest and best way to prepare them is to first wipe them with a clean towel, then place them in dripping-pans and bake them till they are tender."

Mr. R. H. Stevens: Dear Sir—My little daughter Stella has been afflicted a long time with Scrofula, suffering everything. I employed different physicians in East Boston, but they helped her none. I bought some of your Powder Form Vegetine and my wife steeped it and gave it to the child according to the directions, and we were surprised in a fortnight's time to see how the child had gained in flesh and strength. She is now gaining every day, and I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to be the best we have ever tried.

THE Brazos Independent is in a quandary about the mouth of the Brazos river. Its mouth is not wide enough nor deep enough as it is now. We would like to make a suggestion for the benefit of those who want to see the mouth of the Brazos opened wider than it is. Elect the Brazos river to the Legislature. The Brazos river has a great many legislative qualifications. Like most legislators, its origin is rather obscure. The Brazos river is very crooked. So is the average legislator. The Brazos river never dries up completely. That's the kind of creek a legislator is. The current or flow of the Brazos is not clear at all, but rather muddy, and often is choked up with trash. It seems to us that with these qualifications it cannot be kept out of the Legislature. It is true it will have the advantage over some members of the Texas Legislature by having a head of its own.

Liver Kidney and Bright's Disease.

A medicine that destroys the germ or cause of Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and has power to root them out of the system, is above all price. Such a medicine is Hop bitters, and positive proof of this can be found by one trial, or by asking your neighbors, who have been cured by it.

An Old Doctor's Advice.

It was this: "Trust in God and keep your bowels open." For this purpose many an old doctor has advised the habitually costive to take Kidney-Wort—for no other remedy so effectually overcomes this condition, and that without the distress and griping which other medicines cause. It is a radical cure for piles. Don't fail to use it.—Translated from the New Yorker Zeitung.

$You Can Make $1000 Speedily. Any one who takes an agency now can speedily make $1000, and agents at work, but the following extracts show the great value of the business, and are fair samples of many reports received from our agents. An agent in the State of New York writes:—"Yesterday I secured a very large number of subscribers; my profits for the day's work figure up to over $50." A lady agent at work in the State of Missouri, writes:—"In one week I have made nearly $150, taking subscribers for your paper. I secure a subscriber at almost every house." An agent at work in Canada, writes:—"The first ten days I was out, I made over $200. I am astonished at my own success." Letters making similar statements are constantly coming to us. All who engage make money much faster than agents were ever known to make it before. Any one can become a successful agent. No one can fail to make great pay. TRUE & Co., publishers, have always been in the front, and now make by far the greatest offer ever put before the American people. It is not all uncommon for those who work at this business to make over $20 a day. AGENTS WANTED for the well-known, great family publication, THE ILLUSTRATED FAMILY HERALD, published monthly by True & Co., Augusta, Maine. Terms $1 a year. The Herald is the largest and most elegantly illustrated family publication in America, and whoever says anything to the contrary makes statements that are not true; each number contains 24 large pages, 96 long columns. All over heretofore thought of outdone and far surpassed. 12 BEAUTIFUL AND ELEGANT CHROMOS GIVEN FREE TO EACH SUBSCRIBER. Each of these chromos is worth three of the ordinary pictures that are given to subscribers. As beautiful works of high art, these chromos far surpass any pictures ever before presented to the subscribers for any publication. AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER. We send the Herald 3 months free to all who now subscribe, or fifteen months in all for only $1; this great offer induces people to subscribe at once, and taken together with the immense standard publication, and the 12 beautiful and valuable premium chromos, enables agents to secure a subscriber at almost every house they visit. OUR PRIVATE TERMS TO AGENTS, we send to those who order Outfits; it would not be best to publish our terms here; our terms are most liberal, and enable all who take agencies to make money faster than ever they expected to at any business. OUR AGENTS' NEW OUTFIT. The largest, most magnificent, and expensive Outfit ever placed in the hands of agents by any publishers. It consists of the 12 premium chromos, sample copies of the Herald, a large circular, explaining in detail all about the business, and giving private terms to agents, blank subscription lists, instructions for working in the most successful manner, and a certificate of agency showing that you are appointed by us as agent. This large, expensive Outfit is FREE, but in a measure to guard against unprincipled persons ordering it, who do not mean business, we require that 25 cents be sent when it is ordered, which barely pays for the packing and postage alone; the Outfit itself we furnish free. As a further safeguard, we require every person who orders an Outfit to send us a copy of the following letter:—TRUE & Co. Send me at once the agent's new Outfit. I faithfully promise and assure you that I order the Outfit for the purpose of going to work at the business and not in order to get it free by just paying the postage and cost of packing. Enclosed I send 25 cents. Name——. Post-office address——. County——. State——. We stake postage stamps, and it is better to send them than to put silver in a letter. We guarantee the safe delivery in good condition of every Outfit that is ordered. The mails are very trustworthy, and if is best to send small sums of money in a common letter. If we have more applications for agencies from any locality than we need to do the work the money sent for postage and packing on Outfits is returned at once, and the Outfits are of course not sent. We will return the 25 cents sent for postage and packing to any person who, on receiving the Outfit, is not satisfied with it in all respects, or who, on trying the business, is not fully satisfied. No one fails—all are more than satisfied. HOW AGENTS CONDUCT THE BUSINESS. The agent having ordered and received an Outfit goes around from house to house showing the mammoth illustrated paper and elegant premium chromos; he explains that those who subscribe now, paying only $1, will receive the paper for fifteen months, and all 12 of the chromos free. Then once a week, or as often as the agent may think best, the names of the subscribers secured are forwarded to us; as soon as a list of subscribers is received, we forward to the agent the full set of 12 premium chromos for each subscriber, and a receipt for each, entitling him or her to the paper for fifteen months. We then commence to send the papers to subscribers at once and continue regularly for fifteen months. When the agent receives the chromos he goes around and delivers them to the subscribers, collecting $1 from each; thus it will be seen that all connected with the business is perfectly plain and easy. We guarantee the safe delivery in good condition of all that is ordered; if any thing is lost or damaged while passing through the mail we are always ready to fill the order over again at our own expense. OUR ELEGANT PREMIUM CHROMOS. So much room would be required that we cannot give descriptions of these 12 fine works of high art, each one of which is worth ten of those ordinarily given to subscribers; therefore
